

COURTESY PHOTO

Julie Davis paints en plein air.

Artist gives talk on Johnson icons

Julie A. Davis's solo show, "Painting the Town: Iconic Landmarks of Johnson, Vermont," is currently showing at Minemå Gallery through June 8, in collaboration with the Johnson Historical Society.

Mary-Jean Smith of the historical society will discuss the historical significance of the buildings and places in each painting, while Davis will explain what drew her to capture each location on canvas.

The special talk will be held at the gallery on June 2, 2-3 pm. Tea and homemade cookies will be served. The event is free to all, but limited seating is available. Doors open at 1:45 p.m.

More at minemagallery.com.